ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

A word of thanks is not possible without the active support and encouragement of my people. I am indebted to the administrators, boards and rabbis of all the congregations who participated, and even to some of those who did not participate in the march. These people include

To my loving wife Sarah, without whom March would just not be worthwhile

Jenny Roth at Rockdale Temple, Rabbi Isaac at Temple Shalom, Diane

Bullsey at Goff Manor Synagogue, Rabbi George Bernard of Northern Hills

Synagogue, Rabbi Louis Karpman at Alce Temple, Rabbi Ed Juras of Congregation First Temple, Rabbi Arthur Plicker, at Congregation Ohav Shalom,

Samuel at Valley Temple, Sonny at American Synagogue, Mrs. Ruth Teitel at

New Hope Synagogue, Hal Lewis at Congregation Adath Israel, Fred Zeffman

at Congregation Knesset Israel, Rabbi Bob Katz at Beth Adam, and Rabbi

Binette at the Jewish Federation of Cincinnati. I am sure there were others whom I have forgotten but to whom I usually extend my thanks.

I am especially grateful to the staff of the American Jewish Archives on the Hebrew Union College campus. They were extremely helpful in locating old membership lists for many of the participating congregations.

Lastly, I wish to express my deepest gratitude to Rabbi Jacob Heller

Kartun, who made me believe that not all lights at the end of a tunnel are allied to grasping irons. Thanks, Chief.

Occupational and residential patterns of affiliated Cincinnati Jews has been surveyed by means of congregationally supplied membership lists, archival material, and published sources. Individuals have been approached directly. The database established covered three twenty-year periods: a twenty-year period from 1971 to 1991. For 1971, five congregations participated; for 1981, seven; and for 1991/2, ten. In all, almost 6000 data points were transcribed into the database. The data has been reduced and analyzed according to the individual participating congregations and to the community. Results are presented accordingly, relating the congregations to themselves and to the census. The results are presented as tables, and as an aid in visualization as a series of bar graphs. There were no great surprises, except perhaps in the size of the United contingent of the local community. This could have a bearing on the future of community-wide planning as well as for the future survival of some of the smaller congregations.

INTRODUCTION

Today, in 1994, there are no major Jewish congregations in downtown or close-in Cincinnati, although Wise Temple does continue to maintain and use its Plum Street facility. Even so, it must be admitted that this sanctuary could scarcely be called the center of Wise Temple's congregational life. Indeed, their current building in Amberley Village is called the Wise Center. Having already deserted downtown for Abondale decades earlier, in 1945 Rockdale Temple, and in 1976 Wise Temple both moved to Ridge Road between Calbraith Road and Cross County Highway. Other congregations have made similar moves. We may reasonably assume

NOTE

Because of the sensitivity many people have with respect to the circulation of Temple membership lists, all original lists have been destroyed while all research results and materials have been purged of names and street numbers. It is hoped that in this way the privacy of individuals has been satisfactorily protected.

that each congregation had received good reasons for making their respective moves. The purpose of this study is to provide a historical perspective on the question of the location of their present facilities. The study of the history of the people who have lived in the area of the city of Cincinnati has shown that the people have moved to these moves. This thesis documents the occupational and residential trends over a twenty year period (1971-1991/2) for most of Cincinnati's Jewish congregations. While a few congregations readily present themselves and will be discussed, a more detailed analysis and the answers to the above questions are left to other investigators. It is hoped that the information provided may prove helpful to all the participating congregations, as they plan for their respective futures.

INTRODUCTION

Today, in 1994, there are no major Jewish congregations in downtown or close-in Cincinnati, although Wise Temple does continue to maintain and use its Plum Street facility. Even so, it must be admitted that this sanctuary could scarcely be called the center of Wise Temple's congregational life. Indeed, their current building in Amberley Village is called the Wise Center. Having already departed downtown for Avondale decades earlier, in 1968 Rockdale Temple, and in 1976 Wise Temple both moved to Ridge Road between Galbraith Road and Cross County Highway. Other congregations have made similar moves. We may reasonably assume that each congregation had several good reasons for making their respective move, but with their having done so, we may then ask several further questions: Have congregation members likewise shifted the location of their personal residences? Did the synagogues follow the people, or did the people follow the synagogues? Can choice of occupation be shown to have any relationship to these moves? This thesis documents the occupational and residential trends over a twenty year period (1971-1991/3) for most of Cincinnati's Jewish congregations. While a few conclusions readily present themselves and will be discussed, a more detailed analysis and the answers to the above questions are left to other investigators. It is hoped that the information provided may prove helpful to all the participating congregations, as they plan for their respective futures.

METHODS

THE LISTS

Every Jewish Temple and Synagogue in Cincinnati was approached and invited to participate in this study. Ten accepted the invitation.

These were

- New Hope Synagogue
- Congregation Ohav Shalom
- Temple Shalom
- Valley Temple
- Wise Temple

- Rockdale Temple
- Northern Hills Synagogue
- Roselawn Synagogue

- Congregation Adath Israel
- Congregation K'nesset Israel

The groupings indicated above refer to the years for which membership lists were available for each respective congregation. For the first group, lists were available for 1971, 1981, and 1991/3. For the second, the lists were available for 1981 and 1991/3, while for the third, lists were only available for 1991/3. In all cases, the years noted are only approximate and refer to the years for which occupational and residential data were transcribed. This will be explained more fully below. Some congregations had their own archival material dating back to 1971. Others did not. When this was the case, wherever possible, old lists were located in the American Jewish Archives.

THE DATA

Every effort was made to find lists for the years indicated. This, however was not always possible. For those cases, lists were used for years as close to the study years as possible. In no case was a list used if it was more than five years off. For example, in 1976, Wise Temple Center opened on Ridge Rd. In honor of the dedication of their new facility, the congregation published a booklet which included the names of all then current members. This was the list used to reference Wise Temple membership in 1971 and 1981. This is, in fact, the worst case.¹ In all other situations, if the list was not for the study year itself, it was no more than two years off.

Congregational membership lists were then used as a reference base to look up individual entries in the Cincinnati City and Suburban Directories published by the Williams Directory Company and by R. L. Polk. When the membership of a given congregation was less than 300, all members listed were referenced. However, for larger congregations, data transcription was limited to a maximum of the first 300 listed names which could be found in the directories. Names were taken in alphabetical order until 300 could be found. It should be noted that not all

1. It is acknowledged that because the membership list used for Wise Temple for the years 1971 and 1981 was actually from 1976, a certain perturbation may have entered those figures. In one respect, it may be said that the data merely tracks the aging of the congregation over that ten year period. That this is so may be most noticeable with respect to the increase in the number of retirees between the two years (16.4% in 1971 versus 23.9% in 1981). However, since in 1991/3 26.9% of the members were retired, it is not clear exactly what the real perturbation might be. Therefore, no adjustments have been made to the data. With respect to residence, if it could be shown that newer members tend to live in different areas from members of longer standing, then it could be said that the residential data were likewise skewed. However, that analysis is beyond the scope of this study.

people listed could be found in the directories for a variety of reasons including: they lived outside the directory survey area, or they moved into the area after the directory was published, or they did not report their personal information to the Directory company. Whenever possible, information pertaining to people who lived within 100 miles or so of Cincinnati was retained, but this data must be considered unreliable.

In 1971 and 1981 the process was relatively straightforward. However, in 1991, the Polk Company did not publish a Cincinnati Suburban Directory, so it was necessary to use the 1992 directory. Unfortunately, in 1992, Polk did not publish the City Directory, so it was necessary to use the one published the year before. Finally, in January of 1994, Polk released the 1993 City and Suburban Directories. As soon as these were available, they became the references of choice. This is why the 1991 data are referred to as 1991/3. Whenever a congregational listing conflicted with a directory listing, the datum was dropped. Further, any data point that was questionable for any reason whatsoever was excluded from the database.

Finally, since this study examines both occupations and addresses, it was felt that two different collection criteria needed to be established. Therefore, for occupational data, if a membership list or directory entry indicated both a husband and a wife, and if the occupation of both could be determined, a separate entry was made for each person. There was one exception to this rule. When both members of a couple were found to be in retirement, only one entry was made for the two of them. On the other hand, it was felt that residential patterns should be studied on the basis of where families resided. Therefore, only one entry per address was retained for this category. The exceptions here occurred where it could be determined that people living at the same address were not husband, wife and their dependent children. For example, sometimes it was apparent that brothers were living together, or an adult couple with an elderly parent. In such cases, each brother was listed separately, as was the elderly parent.

The data recorded in all years were addresses, occupations, employers, and work addresses. Every attempt has been made to confirm all data by cross referencing with maps, phone books, and the Haines Criss Cross. This extensive cross referencing was particularly fruitful with respect to determining residential neighborhoods. Without this information, it would have been necessary to base residential patterns on zip codes--a far less detailed technique.

In this manner, data for some 1028 members of five congregations were collected for 1971; 1759 members of seven congregations for 1981; and 2112 members of 10 congregations for 1991. Over the three investigational years, a total of 4899 data points were collected. According to the 1987 Demographic Study of the Greater Cincinnati Jewish Community conducted by the Jewish Federation of Cincinnati, Jewish family size averages 2.49 individuals. Therefore, the 1991 data represents the living pattern of over 5200 people, approximately one-fifth of the Cincinnati Jewish population.

SUMMARY TABLES AND GRAPHS

The entire database has been printed for use by future investigators. It is organized by year, each year being sorted by occupation and by residential area. In all, there are 424 pages of database data.

In addition, the database has been summarized by occupation and residence. The summaries have been made for the community as a whole, and have also been broken down by congregational affiliation. The raw data have been summarized for the occupational sort, but not for the residential sort.

Because not all members of all congregations were used as data points for this study, it was necessary to normalize the results of the individual congregations to the entire membership of each respective congregation. Thus, if 300 members of congregation "A" represent 25% of their total membership, and if the sample of 300 members of that congregation is shown to have 10 teachers, it is projected that 40 teachers are members of congregation "A." Thus data from each congregation was normalized to its known total membership before it was combined into tables marked "Normalized Data." All references in this work will be to the normalized data.

Sometimes it is difficult to get a handle on relative quantities by looking at tables alone. For this reason, all tabular data have been presented graphically. Inter-comparison has been simplified by limiting the number of vertical scales to the minimum possible while still presenting readable graphs. In most cases, this resulted in scales of 50% or 100%.

Sometimes, however -- particularly for the comparison among individual categories within given congregations as compared with the whole, it was necessary to use several different scales. But even here, scales were chosen because of their ease of comparison.

RESULTS

Results of this study will be discussed in terms of community wide trends and then by individual congregation.

THE COMMUNITY

Occupationally, two groups have shown notable increases. The health care professionals -- including physicians, dentists, therapists, and allied health workers -- has grown from about 8% of the population to almost 14%. But far more remarkable is the growth in the number of retirees -- from just under 15% in 1971 to almost 25% today. One may expect that these increases have come primarily at the expense of small business owners and merchants as well as those engaged in sales, each group falling over the past twenty years to about half of what they were. The trend away from the small business owner seems completely consistent with the decline of the small town, Main Street Jewish merchant. The dramatic increase in the number of retired members of the community may indicate trouble for the community and for the congregations in years to come. In the Orthodox community the problem is more acute, and this implied graying of the congregations portends significant difficulties for them in the foreseeable future. But they are not the only groups for which this trend may spell trouble if not carefully planned for. While it is possible that this trend just represents an interesting demographic blip, twenty years from now, the baby boom population will be retiring and we may expect the relative numbers of retirees to increase significantly. Therefore, the data suggest that now would be a good time to start developing policies which will enable congregations to adapt to the changes in their financial and sociological makeup which are surely coming.

Perhaps it is this aging trend of the population that has slowed the departure of people from Amberley Village. It has been speculated that families with school-age children have moved out of the city into the Blue Ash and Montgomery areas to take advantage of the suburban school system. Certainly this has had some effect on the substantial decline in the number of Jews living in the Roselawn and Bond Hill communities. But Amberley Village is a more affluent area than Bond Hill or Roselawn, and it is possible that its relatively high Jewish population and its proximity to the synagogues remains a draw for those members who no longer have to worry about their children's educations. Indeed, in 1971, only seven retired Jewish families lived in the area. Today there are 31 of them. Of course, what is not known is how many of those 31 families have lived in Amberley Village since 1971 or before, when their children were in school. Similarly, for Roselawn, Bond Hill and Golf Manor, the number of retirees has grown from a total of 86 in 1971 to 141 today, suggesting that as the population ages, they are no longer worried about the same issues young families might be.

There is another factor at work in Roselawn, Bond Hill, and Golf Manor, however. These areas have a great many modestly priced apartments which may contribute to the appeal of these communities for older residents of fixed or lower incomes. The numbers suggest that the small shop owners of the sixties who originally lived in these neighborhoods have remained there through their retirements. We may assume that these people who may not have been able to afford the more up-scale neighborhoods when they were working would be inclined to stay where they are now. More significant, however, is that Roselawn, Bond Hill, and Golf Manor are important addresses for the Orthodox and more traditionally inclined Jews because this is where their synagogues are. The only exception to this pattern is the Avondale synagogue (which is not included in this study), which has remained in North Avondale years after the other Orthodox (and major Reform) communities have moved further north.

While there is no question that the Middle Region is a less popular address today than twenty years ago (as evidenced by a 33% decline in Jewish population), we should not be too hasty to write it off altogether. These areas still house roughly 40% of Cincinnati's Jews, and it is unlikely that they will empty out as completely as Western Hills has. In addition, there appears to be a trend towards the south and east counterbalancing the northerly push, Hyde Park and Walnut Hills attracting about 10% of the people.

There can be no denying that Cincinnati's Jews are heading north in increasing numbers. In 1991/3, the combined communities of Blue Ash, Montgomery, 16 Mile Stand, and others in the North and Northeast Region represented some 25% of the total.

Lastly, although the database does not show it because street addresses have been purged, it can be reported that there are particular streets or addresses which are very popular with Cincinnati's Jews. These include the Amberley House on Section Road, the apartment buildings on Amberacres Drive, The Madison House and the Regency in Hyde Park, Vera Avenue in Golf Manor, Elbrook Avenue in Amberley Village, Williamsburg Apartments, and to a lesser extent, the Edgecliff in Walnut Hills and the River Terrace in East Walnut Hills. Greenland Place, The Essex House and The Summit East Apartments in Roselawn are also quite popular. For those congregants who are looking for a retirement village, The Evergreen complex adjacent to Williamsburg is growing in popularity.

In overview, the Jewish population of Cincinnati appears to be abandoning the old core bordered by the interstate highways on the east and west and by Norwood Lateral and Cross County Highway on the south and north. It is spreading out. There is an undeniable trend towards the north -- especially the northeast, but Sectors in the southeast and south are also showing strong growth.

CONGREGATION ADATH ISRAEL

Adath Israel was only able to provide membership lists for 1991/3, so it is not possible to demonstrate twenty-year trends. However, we may compare this congregation with current, community wide patterns.

Occupationally, the congregation very closely follows the pattern of the general community. They have about 24% retirees, which, as in most congregations, constitutes their largest single occupational group. They have a few more lawyers than the general trend -- 9.2% vs 6.9% -- but generally the differences are unremarkable.

Similarly, Adath Israel's residential patterns are also largely unremarkable. They follow the general pattern with a predilection for the Central Core, particularly Amberley Village where a good third of the congregation's membership resides. But there is a sizable contingent living in the North and Northeast Sector -- also about one third -- mostly in Blue Ash and Montgomery.

CONGREGATION K'NESSET ISRAEL

Tiny K'neset Israel, like all the Orthodox congregations, may be in some difficulty in the near future. Fully 35% of the congregation is retired. Their saving grace may be in the relatively large number of health care providers among their number -- about 21%.

Virtually all of K'neset Israel's members live in the Central and West Core Sectors, almost 75% of them divided between Amberley Village and Roselawn. But there is a surprising number of people moving northwards with the North and Northeast Region accounting for over 10% of the congregation.

NEW HOPE SYNAGOGUE

The rate of growth in the number of retired members of New Hope Synagogue has matched that of the general community. However, the absolute numbers are somewhat alarming. Today, almost 50% of the congregation is retired. Most of the rest work as company officers and executives or in a variety of miscellaneous fields. Interestingly, while in 1971 New Hope Synagogue provided 20% of the Jewish teachers and professors in the area, today not a single one is a member there.

The residential pattern of New Hope Synagogue has remained consistently within the Middle Region, although a slight shift has occurred between the neighborhoods of the Central and Western Core Sectors. In both 1971 and 1981 approximately 65% and 9% of the members lived in Roselawn and Amberley Village, respectively. Today the numbers are about 41% and 20%, indicating a possible slight upward trend in household incomes among the membership. One of the more remarkable aspects of New Hope's residential pattern is that twenty years ago, 90% of the members lived in the areas immediately surrounding the synagogue. Today that number is still quite high, about 78%.

NORTHERN HILLS SYNAGOGUE

The membership of Northern Hills Synagogue has an unusually well balanced distribution of occupations. Indeed, over the last ten years -- lists were not available for 1971 -- there has actually been a reduction from 10.9% to 7.6% retired members. And at 7.6%, they have a rate of less than one third the retirees of the community as a whole. Also of interest is the extremely high proportion of health care workers in the congregation -- 21.5%.

Northern Hills breaks the mold with respect to residential patterns as well -- unless we consider that people tend to live near the synagogue they belong too. While a respectable number of Northern Hills members do live in the Core Sectors, by far it is the North Hills Sector area of Finneytown that seems to attract them. In 1991/3 27.6% of the membership lived in Finneytown, followed by 18.2% in nearby Wyoming.

CONGREGATION OHAV SHOLOM

The number of retirees at Ohav Sholom has increased at a rate greater than that of the general community. This phenomenon is compounded by the fact that over the last twenty years they have consistently had a higher proportion of retirees than the community as a whole. In 1971 they had 19.6% vs 14.4%. Today the numbers are 42.7% vs 24.9%. They have followed the trend in other areas too, but with lesser impact. They have doubled their proportion of health care workers, showing 10.6% today. They have also doubled the proportion of lawyers in the congregation with 4.5% today. But generally we see a pattern of employment that suggests a membership whose average age is climbing. The rise in professionals, however, may indicate the beginning of an influx of younger members who can provide the core of a resurgence for the congregation.

Twenty years ago, over 90% of the congregation lived in the Middle Region. By 1981 that number had fallen only about 4 points to 86.4%. Today, the proportion of Ohav Sholom congregants living in the Core Sectors remains remarkably high, about 71%. The decline has come almost entirely at the expense of Roselawn, whose proportion of congregants has fallen from 42% to 21%. We should also note the impressive increase in the number of congregants moving into the Northeast Inside I275 Sector. Twenty years ago no members lived in these communities -- primarily Blue Ash and Montgomery, but today over 12% of the congregation does.

ROCKDALE TEMPLE

The available data for Rockdale only goes back to 1981. Since that time they have posted a relatively small increase in their proportionate number of retired members, rising only from about 19% to about 22%. The concomitant precipitous fall in the proportion of company officers and executives and in the number of sales personnel, matched by the rise in scientists and engineers, has resulted in a very balanced employment picture at the Temple.

Rockdale also shows a very balanced picture of residential patterns. Following the general trend of virtually no members residing in the West, Kentucky, or Other Regions, Rockdale today shows between 20% and 30% of its members living in the South, Northwest, North & Northeast, and Middle Regions. The relative number of members residing in the North and Northeast has risen about 2.7 times, coming at the expense of the South and Middle Regions. This is very similar to the community wide picture.

ROSELAWN SYNAGOGUE

As with all the Orthodox congregations, Roselawn Synagogue has a disproportionately high number of retired members. In 1991/3 it was over 45%. This was counterbalanced only by 21.4% of its members working as company officers and executives.

Most of Roselawn's members live in the West and Central Core areas of Roselawn (45.2%) and Amberley Village (17.3%). Otherwise, less than 4% of its members live in any other given sector.

TEMPLE SHOLOM

Temple Sholom has a very well balanced occupational makeup, although there has been a very clear aging of the congregation. In 1971, only 2.6% of the membership were retired. In 1991/3 that number has risen to a very reasonable 21.7%. Also, the respective proportions of salespeople and managers over the past 20 years have fallen by about half, but this has been matched by a rise in health care providers.

In 1971, Temple Sholom drew its membership primarily from the Middle Region with a substantial contribution from the Northwest Region -- particularly Wyoming and Finneytown. That mix has changed, so that today there are actually more members residing in the North and Northeast Region than in the Middle (36.1% vs 33.3%). Blue Ash and Montgomery are the primary growth areas, but the communities outside I275 are beginning to make a showing. The areas showing the biggest drop offs are, as might be expected, Amberley Village and Roselawn. The relative attraction of the North and Northeast Region to members of Temple Sholom as compared with Rockdale or Wise Temples is suggestive of the relative occupational makeup of these three congregations. While all three have experienced a sharp rise in the number of retired members, the proportions are less extreme for Temple Sholom. Sholom therefore may be assumed to have a larger percentage of families with school age children for whom the suburban school districts may pose a greater attraction. Another factor must also be considered. Temple Sholom is a younger organization by some 100 years. Ridge Road is the Temple's first address, so its members did not have to move in order to be near by; Blue Ash and Montgomery may very well be where Sholom's members settled first.

VALLEY TEMPLE

For 1971 and 1981 archival material was available for Valley Temple, making possible for those years a full, representative database. Unfortunately, this was not the case for 1991/3. However, the congregation permitted a direct survey of its membership, with perhaps 1/6th of them responding. This makes the 1991/3 data more reliable in terms of accuracy of reporting, but less reliable in terms of extending the results to the whole congregation. Nevertheless, it is felt that this level of response still permits the inclusion of Valley Temple in the database.

Occupationally, very few of those responding were retired -- only 6.5%. This is consistent with the low level of retirees in past years, 5.6% and 5%, respectively. As with Temple Sholom, this low number is suggestive of the relative youth of the organization as well as its membership. Otherwise, the occupational spectrum of Valley Temple is evenly distributed with the notable exception of the health care fields, which employ over 20% of the congregation.

Following the trend whereby congregants tend to live near their synagogue, a sizable proportion of Valley members live in the Northwest Region, almost exclusively in the North Core area of Wyoming (42% in 1971 vs 40% today). But Valley also shows 5% of its members in the West Sector as well as 20% in the Near East Inside I275 Sector. The North Central areas of Glendale and Green Hills are also gaining in popularity. Meanwhile, there has been a sharp drop off in the proportion of members living in the Central Core, falling from some 14% to just 2.5% since 1971.

WISE TEMPLE

The occupational trends at Wise Temple are completely consistent with that of the community as a whole. They have experienced an increase in the proportion of retired members (up to almost 27% today vs 16.4% twenty years ago), matched by a rise in the proportion of health care providers (now 14.7%). There are a few more lawyers today than in the past and a few more accountants and financial consultants. These increases have been matched by a sharp decline in small business owners (down to just 4.1% from 14.9% twenty years ago).

There has been surprisingly little change in the residential patterns at Wise. Hardly any members live in the West, Kentucky or Other Regions. The South and Northwest Region have remained substantially the same -- around 30% and 18% respectively, but the North and Northeast Region has grown at the expense of the Middle Region. As with the occupational patterns, this too is consistent with the community as a whole. However, it should be noted that for Wise Temple, there is a growing proportion of members moving into the South, East, and East Core Sectors at rates exceeding those of the general community.

CONCLUSIONS

The Jewish population of Cincinnati seems to be abandoning the old core and is spreading out. There is an undeniable trend towards the north, but the east and south are also showing strong growth. It would appear that the decisions to build on Ridge Road and in Wyoming were good ones. Today, a case could be made for developing a congregation just outside the perimeter in Springdale, or West Chester or 16 Mile Stand. Additionally, the decision to renovate, rather than relocate the Jewish Community Center seems to have been appropriate, and will probably remain so for some time to come. For although there is an increasing number of Jews in Blue Ash and Montgomery, there are still many living closer to the river.

Finally, it has long been noted that Jews tend to live near one another, choosing to buy or rent homes in the same neighborhood or on the same street. The data bear this out. Occupationally, there is a remarkable trend towards retirement over the twenty year study period. This corresponds with a significant decline in the numbers of people who sell retail or wholesale goods or who own their own small businesses. The trend away from the small business owner is completely consistent with the decline of the small town, Main Street Jewish merchant. This has only been partly offset by the increase in the health care, legal and financial professions. These trends may presage more of the same. If so, it is time to start developing strategies to serve this aging community.

In spite of its flaws, a simple study such as this can be useful in showing trends in the demographics of the local Jewish population. Yet there is further work that might be done. First, using Census Bureau reports, it may be possible to tie residential preferences to family incomes. This study could be very helpful to congregations attempting to plan for the possible impact of the rising number of retirees among their membership. Secondly, using a list of common Jewish surnames, it should be possible to similarly sample the unaffiliated Jewish population of Cincinnati and then compare those results with this study. Nevertheless, based on this study, we may conclude that at this time a movement to provide permanent congregational and community services farther north might be somewhat premature, although it may be appropriate to begin preparing for such a move by offering satellite services on a trial basis. It will be interesting to see if the geographic core of the Jewish community continues to empty out over the next ten years, or if these close in neighborhoods become subject to renewed interest and rebirth.

SUMMARY TABLES AND GRAPHS

Occupational Tables

Explanatory Note

The four columns of entries have the following meanings:

- "no" for the raw data is merely the actually counted number of individuals falling in this category. For the normalized data, this number has been adjusted by multiplying by the congregational membership and dividing by the congregational sample size. For tables summarizing all congregations together, these numbers represent the respective sums of all congregational entries in a given category.
- "% of all workers" means that the "no" entry in that category for each congregation has been divided by the total number of entries for all congregations.
- "% of cong workers" is the number of people working in that category has been divided by the total number of workers in that congregation.
- "% of workers in field" is an indication of the ratio of the number of workers in that category for that congregation to the number of workers in that category for all congregations.

Explanatory Note

The three columns of entries have the following meanings:

- "% of all congs" relates the number of people in that congregation living in that area have been expressed as a percentage of the total sample for all congregations. The raw data uses unmodified numbers for the calculation directly from database. Normalized data has been adjusted to allow for the projection of the sample size for each congregation onto the actual size of the congregation.
- "% of cong membs" is the number of people in that congregation living in that area divided by the total number of people in that congregation.
- "% of all res in area" is an indication of the ratio of the number of people in that congregation living in that area to all the people from all the congregations living in that area.
- A blank entry in the third column indicates that for that year no one in any congregation was reported as living in that area

Residential Graphs

Explanatory Note

- To the extent possible, labelling of all graphs follows that of the corresponding residential tables.
- To reduce the number of graphs, thus easing review of them, some Regions have been combined.
- Five congregations reported lists for all three sample years, consequently they have three corresponding graph columns in most figures. Two congregations reported for two sample years, thus they only show two sample columns. Three congregations reported only one sample year, thus they show only one sample column. However, in some of the figures some of the columns seem to be missing. This is because those graphs represent the third column of the residential tables for which no one from any congregation lived in that area, sector or region that year.
